Are you interested in our village, its history and its heritage? Would you like to find out more about Falkland's story, share your stories and memories, help us build the picture of Falkland life past and present, or maybe just come and hear interesting speakers?

Monthly meetings

Our monthly meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m. All are welcome to attend: no charge. Our lecturers have covered subjects such as local history, architecture, archaeology, heraldry, crafts, conservation, and the landscape. During the Covid-19 restrictions our meetings are being held online via Zoom: join our mailing list to get an invitation. We hope to meet live in local venues again when conditions allow.

Our latest book

Falkland and its People. 1901–1913 gives a fascinating picture of life in Falkland in the years before the Great War. A little Scottish town proud of its status as a Royal Burgh, with its Provost and Town Council. Most of the places mentioned are still recognisable today, but the social hierarchy, vividly brought to life in these pages, now seems like a different world.

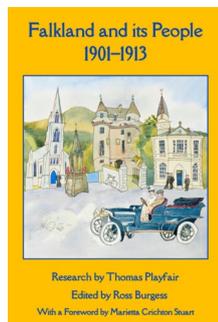

Hardback, 560 pages, 62 illustrations and 4 maps. £20 plus postage and packing.

Documenting Historic Falkland

The Historic Falkland website is dedicated to the history and heritage of our town. Items added so far include a timeline of Falkland history, a chronicle of the 20th century, the building of Back Dykes Terrace, the early history of Falkland in Bloom, and the Big Book of Falkland.

If you've got material we could use, please get in touch.

Falkland Historic Buildings

Falkland Historic Buildings is a Wikipedia-style encyclopaedia of the buildings of Falkland. We've already covered much of the Royal Burgh and the Conservation Area but many of the 300+ articles need expanding, and we plan to extend to the whole historic Parish of Falkland, including Newton and Freuchie.

Take a look, and let us know if you could help fill some gaps, maybe tell us more about your own house or shop, or provide further information or photographs:

Photographic archive

Our archive of old photographs is kept in Falkland Library; many of them have been scanned and stored on the Historic Images of Falkland website:
