Welcome to the General Federation of Trade Unions Educational Trust's (GFTUET) education programme for 2025-2026.

Trade union education is central to developing the growing, combative trade union movement we need to face the challenges of the next few years. At GFTU, we are committed to providing that education. Thousands of trade union members, reps, branch officers and wider movement activists applied for and attended the fantastic courses on our 2024-2025 programme.

Building on our growing success, as we continue to strengthen our educational offer for all, we are proud to present our biggest education programme yet.

Combining the best of online learning, webinars and workshops with high-quality residential courses, we believe this year's programme provides the foundations for further union renewal.

We are so lucky to have such a wonderful space at the 'Workers Retreat', Quorn Grange Hotel, providing us with the ultimate union education centre.

To support and expand the work of our Educational Trust this year, we have launched our 'Education Fund' scheme. This provides union branches, union regions and local trades councils with the ability to access our programme for an annual donation, providing the investment we need to grow, and deepening our reach across the labour movement.

We have continued to listen to our affiliates and attendees of our programme and have developed further brand-new courses for this year. These include: handling disciplinarys and grievances, negotiation skills, disability equality for all trade unionists and our branch officers development course, to name a few.

We hope you will join our exciting educational offer for 2025-2026. Make sure you book early to avoid disappointment.

We cannot wait to welcome you on a GFTUET course soon.

In solidarity,

Gawain Little
General Secretary

Sarah Woolley
President

FOREWORD

About GFTU Educational Trust Courses

We all learn differently and at the GFTU we pride ourselves on providing topical and thought-provoking learning opportunities for all. We apply a range of approaches in the classroom, in conferences, live performances or practical hands-on experiences. Through learning, we develop an understanding that stays with us, empowering us to make a difference, to make more informed choices and to support others to make a difference for themselves, their union, family, and communities.

Our aim is to inspire, educate and support trade union activists across the UK and beyond. You may be a new union member just finding out about how to get more involved in your union or a seasoned activist, a full-time union officer, or possibly something in between.

All are welcome at GFTU Educational Trust courses, and everyone has something new to learn.

Register for Updates

Our regular Education Bulletin outlines new learning opportunities, provides useful learning resources, and keeps you up to date on any changes to our courses. To register your interest in receiving these updates, go here: gftuet.org.uk/mailling-list.

How to Apply

Visit gftuet.org.uk/education to book onto any course.

Attending GFTU Residential Courses

We pride ourselves on welcoming a rich diversity of union members to our courses. We create a safe, tolerant space for everyone to participate and grow irrespective of age, disability, gender reassignment, marriage and civil partnership, pregnancy and maternity, race, religion or belief, sex and sexual orientation. Our training programmes are run by experienced trade union educators who build courses that are lively, challenging, and participative. There will always be someone on hand to support you at all stages of your training programme – leading up to the course, during the course and afterwards (especially around helping you to deliver your action points). Residential courses are held at Quorn Grange Hotel in Leicestershire, owned by GFTU, with all surpluses going back into running more courses and supporting the trade union movement. It is a first-class hotel with brilliant facilities and excellent food. You can find out more information about the hotel by visiting their website via quorngrangehotel.co.uk.

OUR PRINCIPLES

Following a review of our practice of education and discussion amongst ourselves, and our affiliates, the GFTU Educational Trust has agreed a strategic set of principles that will underpin our delivery of education for the coming years. These have been endorsed by both the GFTU Executive Committee and by the Education Officers of our affiliate unions.

Our principles are:

- To provide and develop an understanding of the political & economic context (of political economy and the underlying struggle between labour and capital) within which all Trade Unions operate.
 - To provide and develop an understanding of the political & economic context which has shaped, and which continues to shape, the historic development of Trade Unions.
 - To provide the skills and knowledge base needed to develop confident and well-informed activists in order to build and hone collective power.
 - To see that our educational practice is informed by our commitment to the values of equality, diversity, and inclusion.
 - To ensure that GFTU education is forged through our commitments to social justice, the empowering of communities, and internationalism.

These principles will be applied to all courses and events, whatever their subject matter.

COURSES

Activists' Academy

Alongside high-quality courses throughout the year, those who sign up to any of our Workplace Reps stage 1 courses will be enrolled in our Activists' Academy.

Our academy will link all students with an experienced trade union mentor and be able to speak with other peers, through our peer-to-peer network.

This academy bridges the gap between the incredible learning experiences we all have on union education courses with the reality of implementing what we have learned when we get back to the workplace.

We will undertake a full review of the academy and its impact before developing further.

To find out more about our activists' academy please get in touch via e-mail: campaigns@gftu.org.uk

Activists' Corner

We all like to learn and develop skills that can support our trade union activity. This series of sessions will focus on practical tools and skills that you can take back to your workplace.

Throughout Activists' Corner sessions, you will be able to build your toolkit for building power at work and growing the strength of your union to make meaningful change.

This course is provided online and will be capped at 16 participants to ensure as much participation as possible. All pupils will be provided with a Google Classroom for access to resources, session recordings and materials used.

The sessions will be delivered by a mixture of activists and specialists in their subject and is a great chance to develop all your skills further.

Creative Activism

A key part of our mission is the development, promotion and utilisation of our culture across the movement. We are committed to safeguarding working class culture as a key part of our identity. That is why new to the 2025-2026 programme, we have developed the Creative Activism series, linking together our culture and activism.

Each session provides an opportunity to engage directly in creative activism and produce a piece of art with meaning, whilst learning new skills and approaches. All materials are covered in the cost of the course and no prior experience is necessary.

These courses are half days delivered across venues in the UK with expert tutors and organisations.

Branch Officers’ Development course

A brand-new course on this year’s programme. Our branch officers’ development course is ideal for anyone who has a branch role across our movement. This course is aimed at supporting the development of those that coordinate stewards and workplace reps across an employer or geography.

You might have been in your role for a short time or a long time, this course will review different branch models across the movement and challenge us to discuss what makes an effective branch.

We will include as part of this course a clear understanding of coaching, mentoring, activist ID and how we develop workplace reps/stewards within our branch. We will also focus on strategies for building activism within our movement and exploring theories of trade union renewal.

Bargaining and Organising for Neurodiversity Part I & II

Part I

In this two-day in person course for union reps and activists, we will learn the meaning of the term ‘neurodiversity’ and related terms such as neurodiverse, neurodivergent, neurotypical. This course will enable participants to be confident in Identifying and understanding six neurodivergent conditions, understand aspects of neurodiversity and neurodivergent experience, e.g., spectrum, social judgements and understand the social model of disability and apply it to neurodivergence.

This course will give practical advice, support, and strategies to help participants identify barriers that workplaces and working conditions present to neurodivergent workers and measures to remove or reduce them, identify workplace changes that will benefit neurodivergent workers and understand the role of the trade union representative in bargaining, campaigning, and representing for change.

Part II

This is a brand-new course in this year’s programme. This is aimed at those that have completed stage 1 from our last programme or those more experienced with bargaining and organising for neurodiversity.

This follow on curse will deepen understanding, explore the change we need across our workplaces and inform discussions across our movement.

Bargaining, Organising & Campaigning Around AI and Data

A two-day in person course for union reps and activists to build confidence on how AI is changing our workplaces and world, and how unions can utilise digital tech to build power.

The course combines two key themes: organising on AI and organising with AI.

Organising on AI cuts through the hype to demystify AI and to critically understand the political context of technological change, and to dig into strategies and tools for collectively challenging and negotiating with the employer. Organising with AI introduces the technical background to AI and how unions are leveraging these tools to make our organisations more effective, including driving ballot turn out and member communications.

The course will use interactive exercises and applied learning so that reps and activists come away feeling confident and empowered to negotiate and bargain with the employer around these critically important issues, and to advocate for responsible and effective use of these tools within unions.

Bitesize Equalities and Employment Law

BITESIZE EQUALITIES:

A series of ten 1-hour online sessions that will equip participants with the knowledge, tools, and imagination to understand and tackle inequalities in wealth, income, and power. From pay gaps to power structures, and from legislation to local communities, participants will explore how inequality is built into our systems and gain a clear sense of levers for meaningful change.

The course is delivered by the Equality Trust in partnership with expert-speakers

The sessions will cover:

- What is structural inequality?
- How inequality fuels our biggest crises
- Mind the gap: Pay disparities and ratios
- Exploring the Extreme Wealth Line
- Beyond box-ticking: Making equalities legislation count
- Be a Socio-Economic Duty (SED) changemaker
- Reimagining policy: Blending the margins and the mainstream
- Changing the architects of design: Co-production and participatory decision-making

CPD Day for Professional Trade Union Tutors

We aim to bring together all professional trade union education tutors across the movement. You might deliver education and training as part of your full-time union staff role, or you might be a full-time trade union educator, working for a further education college. This continual professional development (CPD) day is for everyone to come together and discuss emerging technologies, curriculum and pedagogies for the best education and learning across our movement.

We recognise the incredible breadth of skills and experience across the union movement in the delivery of trade union education and believe providing the space for educators to come together is vital to strengthening activism in our unions.

This is a one-day course, delivered at the Workers’ Retreat, Quorn Grange Hotel in Loughborough.

Disability Equality for all Trade Unionists

With huge changes to equality law, practice and workplace policy and changes in Government policy, the role of equality for all disabled people is vital. The trade union movement must be at the forefront of these changes.

Utilising a social model of disability, this course is ideal for workplace reps, branch officers and those involved in trades union councils that want to take forward the importance of disability equality for all.

This is a two-day course, delivered at the Workers’ Retreat, Quorn Grange Hotel in Loughborough.

Empowering Workers: a trade union certificate in labour law and the labour movement

Labour Law courses generally focus on imparting to students what the law is. This is, of course, useful for the union activist or community organiser by providing a set of potential weapons to add to her armoury when defending or seeking to advance the interests of her constituency. But labour law is only one element of that armoury which covers industrial, political, negotiating, campaigning, historicising, thinking, and organising modes. To decide strategy or tactics to achieve the goal of defending and advancing the interests of her constituents, it is not only necessary to have a grasp of these elements but also to understand their interaction, their limits and utility.

This course examines labour law and labour movements as well as their history in the multi-faceted context of the struggle between social justice and market forces, for the improvement of the lives of workers, and seeks to provide insight into how and why the law operates as it does.

This unique approach will equip students with the skills and knowledge they need to make a difference through empowering workers.

In addition to the attended sessions, there are some great online learning materials that are included in the course, which can be accessed anytime.

Price:

£2150

The price includes accommodation for the residential session at Quorn Grange Hotel, as well as food, and course materials for all of the sessions outlined overleaf.

Your Commitment

- Attend the residential session at Quorn Grange Hotel in Leicestershire and the four in-person days at Birkbeck School of Law and Hamilton House, London.
- Commit to group online sessions with programme tutors.
- Complete the “self-study” elements appropriate to the course.
- Have the backing of your union in terms of course fees and time to complete the course.

Course Accreditation

This course is accredited by Birkbeck School of Law as a short course.

Course Tutors

We have very deliberately established this as a blended programme with a mixture of residential and one-day in-person sessions. Teaching is led by Oscar Guardiola-Rivera, Professor of Human Rights and Political Philosophy at Birkbeck School of Law, together with Lord John Hendy KC, former Thompsons CEO Geoff Shears, and Prof. Keith Ewing of the Institute of Employment Rights. The programme is supplemented with contributions from several visiting speakers who have extensive experience of labour law, at senior levels in the trade union movement, in academia or as legal professionals.

Requirements for study

This course is designed to be accessible to trade union activists and no prior qualifications are necessary to enrol. Whilst some experience of trade union negotiations and campaigning are assumed, there is no expectation of legal understanding or prior legal knowledge in order to undertake this course.

The course is aimed at senior activists and aspiring senior activists in the trade union movement and we hope will provide a firm foundation in the history and politics of labour law and the labour movement for future trade union leaders.

GFTU Summer School

This is our annual opportunity to take stock and think about the future of the Movement and where we go next. As we look to build on recent organising and campaigning successes, the course will help participants to think strategically and embrace new ideas.

Our Summer School provides the space and stimulus for a bolder, bigger and better union Movement. This course is aimed at experienced and newer trade union activists who want an opportunity to think outside the box with key leaders from across the movement.

This summer school will be extra special as it will include the graduation of those that took part in the first ever pilot of the Activist Academy.

Health & Safety Reps 1 & 2

Stage 1 (5 days)

The essential first course for new union representatives – both shop stewards and safety representatives. The course is split into a 3-day residential course followed by two further days delivered online. We will explore the trade union approach to health and safety, how to spot and deal with safety hazards, the rights and responsibilities of union representatives, and the main aspects of health and safety legislation. We will also cover how to carry out safety inspections and participate in safety committees.

Lessons in Organising Strategy and Workplace

The ‘turn to organising’ in the trade union movement represents an important development that has helped support renewal across the labour movement. However, commitments to develop an ‘organising agenda’ in trade unions can sometimes be more apparent than real. The term itself carries many different meanings and this can add to the confusion. In this course we draw on the book ‘Lessons in Organising’, and a wide range of other sources, to develop a deeper understanding of what organising is, and how organising approaches can help build union power.

There are two versions of the programme. Lessons in Organising - Strategy is aimed at trade union leaders and those with roles as organisers. It looks at how to develop a strategic approach to organising including establishing organising cultures in trade unions. Lessons in Organising - Workplace is ideal for union workplace reps/stewards and branch officers and looks at combining local strategies with practical steps to develop effective organising across branches and workplaces.

Please register for the course that is closest to your role within the union movement.

The course tutor is Professor Howard Stevenson. He has extensive experience as a researcher and activist and is one of the co-authors of ‘Lessons in Organising’.

Mental health: A Trade Union Response

A record number of people are out of work due to long term sickness. We are facing a growing mental health crisis in our society. The role of our trade unions is to organise a response. Collectivising around mental health and understanding it is a health and safety issue is vital.

This course will look to equip trade union reps for union strategies to this growing crisis.

Political Schools

These new courses build on our successful Political course in parliament from our 2024-2025 programme. Three connected sessions across the year, our political schools will look at the role of trade unions in influencing parliament, the political world around us and our economy.

Our politics and parliament school explores the relationship between the trade union movement and parliament, the nature of the state and how we can make use of parliament to help effect change. A morning of exploring politics and the state in the classroom is followed by an afternoon in Parliament, meeting with an MP to discuss parliamentary procedure and taking a tour of the House of Commons.

Our politics and the economy school explores how politics is grounded in the economic base of our society and, in turn, impacts on that economic base. The course is co-taught by GFTU tutors and members of the economics department at SOAS, University of London. No prior study of economics is required for this course, which is accessible to all trade union activists.

Our politics and trade unions school draws all of this learning together to explore the role of trade unions in bringing political change. During the two days at Quorn, we will explore in more detail how mass engagement of membership, an understanding of economics and strategic use of parliament can combine to make trade unions powerful political players in bringing change. Attending the politics and parliament school and the politics and the economy school are not strict requirements of attending this course but having attended at least one of these will be advantageous.

Political Economy Conference

Part sponsored by Lipman-Miliband Trust, we are hosting our first political economy conference for UK trade unionists.

This conference is for all levels of unionists who'd like to actively participate in a discussion and take it back to their union and branch. We will together reflect where the UK trade union movements are, what we have achieved and what the current challenges are, and where we should be heading in the short- and long-term future.

The speakers will be both academics and trade union leaders, who will guide the conversation around each topic.

- What would the economy look like, if it was rebuilt in the interest of the workers?
- What is political economy and why does it matter for trade unions?
- Post-Brexit UK economy: Austerity, privatisation, and no growth
- The world after Trump: Tariffs, nationalism, and authoritarianism
- How do we bring political economy into our fights?

We start by imagining what alternative economies may look like, if it was geared in favour of the workers, not capital. Then we lay out the foundation by defining political economy, and its importance for the trade union and working-class movements. The two following sessions delve into the domestic and international economies, respectively, with group activities. We then finish by devising concrete plans to implement the points discussed at branch/union level.

Political Economy for Beginners

This political economy for beginners course is for anyone interested in the reasons why things are so bad for the workers and what can be done about it.

If you have questions like:

- ‘why are we working more, yet our lives getting harder?’
- ‘what are the bosses doing? why are they paid so much?’,
- ‘why is there so much poverty and inequality?’
- ‘why is there no housing and decent jobs available?’
- ‘what can be done to challenge the status quo?’

...then this course is for you.

The course is designed to develop a class understanding by making complex information and political language accessible. This course will diagnose the problem, propose a solution and the tools to fight. It will form the basis for a progressive alternative economic, political and industrial strategy for Britain, so we can start tilting back the social balance in favour of labour not capital.

It is to help you within your own union, at work, and wider political/community campaigning and organising. Participants will be encouraged to draw on their experience as active TU members to build and widen knowledge.

The course material will be based on the upcoming book ‘Out of the Ruins: Rebuilding the British Economy’ by Larry Elliott, Costas Lapavistas, and Doug Nicholls.

Political Economy International School

This online international seminar series is built upon the joint Lecture Series in Advanced Political Economy (SAPE) by SOAS University of London and The New School for Social Research in New York in 2021-23.

With an additional partner The Center for Heterodox Economics (CHE) at the University of Tulsa, this seminar series will connect the academic discussions to the real-world power struggle and workers’ everyday lives.

We will talk about current affairs, trends in production and work, and their implications on trade unions and the working-class movement. Each week, we will invite leading experts on the subject and analyse what’s been going on by identifying key challenges. Together with the audience, we want to think about how we can fight against the challenges and build a movement toward a more systematic change.

Strategy Series

Strategy is not just a word. Strategy is about how we all within the trade union and wider labour movement build the power and capacity to improve workers lives. The employers have strategy, the managers have strategy, and it is vital that as a united labour movement we build our own. This series will include discussions from leading thinkers on; reviving the trade union movement, how we build union strategy, the role of women and feminist approaches to our unions, strategies for developing activists and the capacity to win campaigns big and small.

Trade Union Leadership and Innovation Programme (TULIP)

As working people and their trade unions face unprecedented challenges, our Movement needs leaders with the skills, ideas, and drive to make the world a better and fairer place. This programme is aimed at those in middle and senior management roles in trade unions who are looking for a course that will help them reflect on their work, and the importance of developing as effective and ethical leaders of large, complex organisations. It draws on established research in leadership and management, across a range of issues, and applies this critically to the very specific context of democratic, member-led trade unions.

The course provides a unique combination of cutting-edge theory and research, practical exercises to support personal development and a political analysis that recognises the imperative for trade union renewal in a time of economic, social and technological dislocation.

TULIP cohorts are made up of participants from across the trade union movement. Learning with, and from, those who work in different trade unions and diverse contexts, is an experience that participants value highly.

In addition to the attended sessions, there are some great online learning materials that are included in the course, which can be accessed anytime.

Price:

The prices shown include all accommodation, food, and course materials for the five two-day sessions outlined overleaf.

We have very deliberately established this as a blended programme with a number of “taught” residential sessions. Teaching is led by Professor Howard Stevenson. Howard is an experienced academic, adult educator and trade union activist. He has published widely in the areas leadership and management, trade union renewal, and union organising. The programme is supplemented with contributions from several visiting speakers who have extensive experience of leadership in trade unions, including at General Secretary level.

GFTU-accredited and ILM-accredited pathways available

This course is available through two pathways. The basic programme comprises all taught elements, including access to study materials in between taught sessions. There is no formal assessment and accreditation is provided by GFTU. The ILM-accredited programme provides access to a Level 4 Certificate in Leadership and Management, awarded by the Institute of Leadership and Management (ILM) and formally accredited by City and Guilds. This pathway involves the successful completion of three assignments. All assignments are based closely on participants’ own work contexts and offer a practical opportunity to link key course concepts to real world work challenges.

Train the Trainer for Trade Union Educators, Union Reps and Staff

This was one of the most requested courses we had in 2024-2025. We have written three slightly different train the trainer courses to suit whoever would like to develop their educator skills, please see descriptions below and apply for the one that best suits your role.

Trade Union Educators

This is for full time trade union educators. You might be working at as part of a college or be directly employed to deliver education in your unions. This will be your main role within the union movement.

Trade Union Reps

This course is aimed at trade union reps/stewards/branch/national activists. You will be interested in developing skills and delivering education in the future. You might also be looking to develop your skills further in delivering education and training in your 'lay' union role. This course is for trade union activists only.

Trade Union Staff

This course is aimed at Trade Union staff who have educational delivery as a part of their role, but not their whole role. They might be regional officers, organisers or other roles associated with supporting and delivering trade union education.

Where Your Money Goes

Provide Access to Essential Courses:

Your subscription will cover the cost for one individual to attend any of our 3-day courses, offering comprehensive learning experiences that equip participants with essential skills and knowledge.

Support New Representatives:

Your support will enable a new representative to attend the Health and Safety in the Workplace Stage 1 training, empowering them to advocate for safe working conditions and protect the rights of their fellow workers.

Empower Women in Leadership:

Your subscription will fund one student's attendance at a Women in Leadership course, fostering gender diversity and empowering women to take on leadership roles within their unions and workplaces.

Combat Sexual Harassment:

Your contribution will enable five individuals to receive training on identifying and challenging sexual harassment in the workplace, fostering safer and more inclusive work environments for all.

Our Impact: Empowering Young Members

"Sometimes actually in the roles that we have, we don't have the opportunity to own something. Like being able to own it and work with other young members to create something for other young people, that's the real power. And, of course, that's the skill as well. And you can start to learn and share ideas and share experiences. And then, of course, you can progress from there and you can go forward from there."

Quincy Raymond

At GFTUET, we're dedicated to empowering young union members through our Young Members' Development Weekend (YMDW) and other educational initiatives. Hear it from Quincy, one of our supporters.

Join our Education Fund

The GFTUET Education Fund was created to widen access to independent trade union education. It allows union branches, regions, and local Trades Councils from non-GFTU-affiliated unions to take part in our courses by making an annual contribution. The scheme is designed to ensure that more union members across the movement can benefit from high-quality education, regardless of affiliation.

Who Can Join?

Union branches and regions not affiliated to the GFTU, along with local Trades Councils, are eligible to contribute to the Education Fund and access our programme.

Contribution Levels:

Union Branches

- Small branches (under 500 members): £650
- Large branches (500 or more members): £1,300

Union Regions

- Regions of unions with under 400,000 members nationally: £5,000
- Regions of unions with over 400,000 members nationally: £10,000

Trades Councils

- Minimum contribution: £100
- Medium contribution: £650
- Large contribution: £1,300

How It Works:

Contributors to the Education Fund can send members on GFTUET courses throughout the year, within a fair use framework. For Trades Councils, a pooled system is in place to ensure fair access across contributing councils.

By joining the Education Fund, your branch, region or Trades Council can help build access to education that supports organising, leadership and solidarity across the movement.

Skills for life

Our Skills for Life courses make everyday life that little bit easier.

We give you a safe space to address topics like confidence, mental wellbeing, and communication. Courses include:

- Managing stress
- Preparing for the driving theory test
- Online yoga
- Beginners British Sign Language (BSL)

History

Explore history with us! Work on projects, join events, and chat with fellow learners to dive into the past together. Learn to create timelines, research, evaluate sources, and present your findings confidently.

We offer over 100 history courses each year, including:

- Irish history
- The British Dark Ages
- Edward III and the Plantagenet Dynasty
- The Golden Age of Persia
